“Vivid ruby. Ripe raspberry and cherry aromas, along with hints of floral pastilles and succulent herbs. Gently sweet and seamless in texture, offering fresh red fruit and blood orange flavors that deepen on the back half. Fine-grained tannins provide gentle grip to a long, sappy finish that echoes the red fruit and floral notes.”

“Rich and full in the mouth, this still-young wine also has a good structure. It is dark and dense, smoky over the red-berry fruits. Concentrated fruit and tannins give a solid base for the wine's ripe, aromatic character. Drink from 2017.”

2012

- 90 Pts Wine Advocate #213, June 2014 Issue

“The 2012 Morgon Domaine de Javernieres comes from 24 acres of 45-year-old vines. This has one of the most intense aromatics from Duboeuf in 2012 – vibrant black cherries, balsamic, licorice and cranberry notes that expand nicely with aeration. The palate is supple and lithe on the entry, with juicy ripe tannins, plenty of dusky black fruit, and a cohesive, spicy finish. Drink now-2020.”

- 90 Pts Wine Advocate #207, June 2013 Issue

“Its ripe dark berries allied to a mouthwatering, saline and carnal savor, Duboeuf’s 2011 Morgon Domaine Javernieres incorporates prominent peat and black tea smokiness and its tannin, while surprisingly abundant for its genre, is fine-grained and well-integrated. While I would scarcely go so far as to call this “the Romanee-Conti of Morgon” (which I hope and trust Georges Duboeuf was claiming with tongue at least partly in cheek), it is certainly an impressive performer and an outstanding value that should drink well at least through 2015.”
