purity of fruit also some tension and grip on the big finish. It is beautifully balanced, showing mid-palate finesse to go with the fine fruit. It does probably need a little time in the cellar, but it should be in good form by mid-summer. It won't take long. At that point, its fruit should ascend to its rightful place - in charge and not secondary to the structure. I let it sit for an hour in the glass and it became fruitforward, delicious and exuberant,"
